HISTORY OF THE COMPETITION

The competition was launched in 2022 by the Ars Augusta e.V. cultural society in Görlitz-Zgorzelec with the aim of reconnecting to the old tradition of "Gesangsvereine" and the Silesian Music Festival, one of the oldest singing festivals in Europe. Today, the Silesian region connects three European countries (Germany, Poland, and the Czech Republic). The competition aims to build on this historical heritage, the tradition of art singing while simultaneously promoting the younger generation of singers and pianists and the cooperation between the neighboring countries.

The first edition (2022) was dedicated to "Hellas," the second edition to the song on Renaissance poetry ("Orpheus: Spirit of the Renaissance"). Following the third edition on the topic of Sacred Song and Folk Song (2026), the fourth edition (2028) will focus on Franz Schubert and the classical period.

Hans Heinrich XIV, Count Bolko von Hochberg (born 1843 in Fürstenstein Castle – died 1926 in Bad Salzbrunn, today Poland) was a member of the important Silesian family of Hochberg. After graduating from the Maria Magdalenen Gymnasium in Breslau and studying law at the universities of Bonn and Berlin, he initially worked as a diplomat, but his love of music was so great that he began composing at a young age. At the age of twenty, he performed his first opera in Schwerin Theater. He composed two operas, numerous songs, chamber music, symphonies, and concertos. His artistic activity and organizational talent quickly gained recognition at the royal court in Berlin, where Emperor Wilhelm I appointed him director of the Royal Theater. From 1876, he also organized the Silesian Music Festivals in Görlitz. He played a major role in promoting artists such as Gerhart Hauptmann, Richard Strauss and others.
